Council weighs youth problem, rejects center

The youth of Carmel, both permanent and transient, were again the object of discussion at the Carmel city council meeting last night.

Plans were discussed for distributing a brochure, aimed at the summer flow of young people, explaining Carmel laws and the possibility of a drug center received a boost.

The committee on public welfare, consisting of councilmen Ken Brown and Frank Falge, recommended no immediate action on a request from high school student Maddie Dudley for a drug information center and coffee house.

"Her presentation actually involves two proposals that should be considered separately," they reported, "a center for drug information and to provide help to drug users and their parents, and a coffee house where young people can talk over problems, eat, and possibly provide sleeping and bathing facilities for transients."

The later proposal was rejected flatly. "Operation of a coffee house is a matter for private enterprise and not a legitimate undertaking for municipal government," the committee concluded, after quoting Abraham Lincoln.

The committee was somewhat more enthusiastic about a drug center. Carmel Unified School District has hired John Frykman as drug counselor, but no location has been found.

"Some private and religious organizations have expressed interest in helping to provide a location," Falge said.

The committee recommended waiting until all other possibilities for obtaining a location for a center were exhausted before considering providing assistance in location.

City attorney William Burleigh suggested another way to help the center.

"I attended the school board meeting last night, and they have sent a letter to the council asking that the school district, the city council, Monterey county, and the house of education for Monterey enter into a joint-power agreement to establish a center," he said.

The center would be for the purpose of detoxification, not a social center.

"This is exactly the sort of proposal we need," said councilman Eben Whittlesey. "We are not in a position to undertake the project by ourselves. We should have a combination of public agencies with their various skills and funds cooperating."

Councilman Bernard Anderson agreed. "It is the logical answer, and settles our responsibilities," he said.

A committee was appointed to work with the other three powers on the matter.

Mayor Barney Laiolo suggested a possible solution to the problem of distributing a brochure published by the city titled "Price of Peace."

The brochure explains certain laws, such as no sleeping in cars or on the beach, which young people might not be aware of when coming to Carmel.

Palm Beach published a similar brochure, and Laiolo had discussed the distribution with the Palm Beach mayor.

"They set up simulated road blocks made of rope at both ends of town," he said. "Four Jaycee's distributed the brochures at each road block, and a policeman was on hand but not on duty."

Laiolo suggested that a similar program in Carmel, along with distribution in motels, grocery and retail stores, might solve the problem, and asked for suggestions from the council and citizens.

'I'm just wondering where I'm going to get two men just to stand by the road blocks," said Police Chief Clyde Klaumann.

Gunnar Norberg spoke from the audience to suggest a parking permit be used to cover the cost.

"Back in 1960 Colonial Yale suggested implementing a parking permit of $1 per car per year for every car that parks on Carmel streets," he said. "Such a tax, if only 25 percent efficient, would eliminate any property tax in Carmel and pay for 15 extra policemen."

"Now tourists are using our beaches as if they were a park, with no fee at all," he continued.

"That suggestion was made when people still wanted to put a wall around the city" said the mayor.

But then we would be charging tourists for the use of our streets," added Brown. "I can just see the American Civil Liberties Union jumping down our throats."

No action was taken on the suggestion.

A request for an ordinance to prohibit commercial vehicles from parking in residential areas was heard by the council from Carmel resident Carvel Baldwin.

Baldwin mentioned a truck parked on the corner of Carmelo and 12th, where the owner is in the process of building a house.

"He's been building his house for a year and a half. I asked him if he couldn't remove the truck from the road and put it on his lot," Baldwin said. "He said he wouldn't, that it was his home and he would do what he pleased."

Baldwin also mentioned a Hertz rental truck now being used as storage for sleeping bags and clothing by a group of young people.

"This matter was studied a couple years ago," said Councilman Whittlesey, "and it was felt that, while there are occasional abuses, we are cognizant of the fact that Carmel is not devoted solely to upper income, retired, and elderly people, and many working people would like to park larger vehicles by their homes.

"You can say that a electrician can park his pleasure car in the street and his truck on his lot, but what difference really does it make," he continued. "Is an electrician's truck different from a doctor's Cadillac?"

Councilman Falge disagreed. "This type of thing isn't good for Carmel," he said, "and the problem can grow very badly if we do nothing to control it.

No action was taken.

In other action the Council:

..... requested the state to expedite construction of the Hatton Canyon scenic highway parallel to Highway 1 from the Carmel River to Highway No. 68.

..... made three appointments to the Carmel Cultural Commission: Mrs. Barbara Torrell, present acting chairman Stanley Ashton, and current commission member Robert Evans.

..... couldn't find a use for $12,703 allocated to the city by the state as the city's share of TOPICS funds, and asked the state if the city could accumulate it with another year's apportionment and finance a more substantive program.

"There are only a limited number of uses for this money, explained Clerk Hugh Bayless, "and the government hasn't clearly spelled them out."

Two uses the government has approved are signal lights up and down Ocean Ave., or on-off ramps to any freeway that might run through Carmel, he added.

..... recognized the Carmel Employees Association as the organization representing the employees under the Meyer-Milias-Brown act.

..... hired two more men for the forestry crew.

..... declared two trucks in the public works department surplus and called for bids to sell them. The trucks are a 1953 GMC 1½ ton dump truck and a 1953 GMC 2½ ton dump truck.

..... set July 8 at 8 p.m. as the time for a public hearing for consideration of an ordinance amending off street parking requirements in the residential district.

..... awarded the contract to improve Santa Lucia Ave. between Rio Road and Dolores Street to Granite Construction company at $16,452.

Area Drug Treatment Center a possibility?

Carmel school board trustees Richard Wilsdon and James Miller were appointed as representatives of the school district last week to work with other Monterey County officials to establish a drug counseling and treatment center.

The board authorized Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor to write letters to the City of Carmel, Monterey County and the County Board of Education, asking that they appoint representatives to meet with Wilsdon and Miller to discuss a possible joint-powers agreement.

Carmel attorney William Burleigh, a member of the board's Drug Misuse Committee, suggested that a joint powers agreement would be a logical way to establish a drug center and spread the cost equitably among the various local governmental jurisdictions that are directly involved with the problems of drug abuse. A similar arrangement has recently been adopted in Salinas.

If a counseling and treatment facility is established, John Frykman, the district's community counselor, would presumably have a leading role in its operation.

The board agreed that no firm committment to any sort of joint powers agreement could be made until Frykman had an opportunity to study the local situation in greater depth and make his own recommendations.

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

I returned Thursday from my trip to Palm Springs where I attended a convention relating to my electrical business. However, I did find time to discuss mutual problems with the mayor and police chief of that fine city. We talked over many problems relating to ordinances, regulations, and police matters. I might mention now that Palm Springs has one problem that we don't. That is, approximately half of the population is Indian, and thus they are required to operate two planning commissions, and also to work closely with the Secretary of the Interior.

I am happy to see that the Carmel Unified School District has hired a counselor for the drug abuse problem. It is my hope that this will prove beneficial to the entire community.

The hiring of a part-time secretary for the Cultural Commission is under way. This should help in upgrading the function there.

The Santa Lucia Street project is about complete, and it has helped tremendously in easing the traffic approach off Rio Road. The path for bicycles and walking on the south side will also be well used.

We are now considering road changes at Ocean and Carpenter to help this congested area.

At this time of year we tackle the salary schedule and changes. It is my hope that we will be able to hold the tax base at its present level.

I wish to thank Mrs. Reeves for accepting the chairmanship of Carmel's part of the Bicentennial which will take place at the Carmel Mission.

Your comments on this weekly report will be appreciated.

Burleigh named 'City Attorney of the Year'

A purple daisy lollypop and a resolution of commendation were both presented to Carmel attorney William B. Burleigh at Carmel's city council meeting last night.

The commendation was in honor of being voted City Attorney of the Year for the State of California.

The purple lollypop, bought after taking a collection from the city employees, was "a tangible proof of our esteem, so you know the commendation is more than empty words," according to councilman Eben Whittlesey.

Burleigh was voted City Attorney of the Year at the annual spring meeting of the City Attorney's Department of the League of California Cities in Newport Beach on May 7, mainly due to his victory over the financial disclosure law.

Last year, Burleigh, representing Carmel, fought a law stating that all public officials have to disclose their personal net worth to the public.

"This meant that practically everyone -- school board members, department heads, county, state, local and district officials -- had to disclose this information", he said. "Many people were resigning over the law, and others were threatening to resign.

Burleigh's case was heard by the Supreme Court in six weeks, a record time. The court declared the legislation void in its entirety.

Former councilman Gunner Norberg suggested that the commendation also be made for an earlier case.

"In 1965 Burleigh was instrumental in discouraging the building of an oil refinery in Monterey county," he said. "This was the first time we had opposed Standard Oil of New Jersey."

"Someone suggested that after winning against the largest oil company and the largest state in the Union, we ought to go after the Federal government," Burleigh replied, laughing.

Council cites Matthew Allen

The city council commended Matthew J. Allen, Carmel's animal control officer, for matters above and beyond his normal duties at its regular meeting last night.

Allen, who works through the police department, noticed a report on a car driven by a man wanted for strong arm robbery of an elderly woman in Carmel.

While on duty he spotted the license plate and immediately reported the location of the car to the police department.

This action led to the apprehension of the man wanted for robbery, and also to the apprehension of his two companions. All were wanted by one or more police departments.

Councilmen report on conclave

By FRANK FALGE
City Councilman

Councilman Ken Brown, newly elected Councilman Bernard Anderson and I attended the League of California Cities Mayors and Councilman's Institute at the Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles, May 20-22.

The Institute is a shirt-sleeve session designed to acquaint new councilmen and mayors with facts to assist them in carrying out their new duties, which are very complex and comprehensive. Not the least of those is carrying out the wishes of "serious" Carmelites who want to "keep Carmel Carmel," against the incursions of ever-increasing hoardes of visitors who want to enjoy with us this loveliest of all places.

Almost 500 local officials attended the three-day sessions, presided over by Mayor Howard H. Wiefels of Palm Springs.

The Institute got off to a good start with a meaningful address by Mayor Jack Maltester of San Leandro, who has been very active in the League of California Cities and is currently president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. His subject was, "The City Council and Political Leadership."

The second speaker had a vital subject: "Councilmen and the Law of Municipal Corporations in California." The very knowledgeable William G. Holliman, Jr., Assistant Legal Counsel of the League covered the subject. Councilmen paid rapt attention, in order to avoid the pitfalls of the vast legal maze of which we are a part. A whole day might well have been spent on this subject with the many questions which came from the audience.

Howard Gardner, Associate Director of the League, wound up the first session with a description of the "Principles of Government Organization."

Among the next day's work sessions with questions and answers, one period was devoted to municipal financing and taxes. The problems of city planning, MARGARET MEAD, world famous anthropologist and lecturer, will be in Carmel this week as the house guest of Dr. and Mrs. Scott Heath. Dr. Mead will speak Monday night at MPC and confer with Mrs. Heath, a longtime associate, during her stay.

To start in July:

Mrs. Vicky A. Jones new Carmel librarian

Mrs. Vicky Anderson Jones of Fort Worth, Texas, has been appointed the new Carmel Librarian, according to an announcement by the Board of Trustees of the Harrison Memorial Library. Mrs. Jones will replace Mrs. Ruth Galvin Thornburg, who is retiring in July after 15 years of service.

Mrs. Jones, a native of Midland, Texas, was educated in the elementary and secondary schools of that city. She was graduated from Texas Christian University at Fort Worth in 1962, and received her Master's degree in Library Science from the University of North Carolina in 1965.

From 1963 until 1967, Mrs. Jones worked at the public library in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, where she became assistant librarian. After returning to Texas in 1967, she served as assistant branch head, then as branch head in the public library system of Fort Worth.

She comes to Carmel with excellent recommendations. "We are all delighted that she is going to be the new city librarian," said Mrs. Patricia Sippel, president of the Board of Library Trustees.

Purity Market to close June 27

The Purity Market on Mission and 6th in Carmel will close soon. Assistant manager of the store, Randy Randazzo, stated that he had been ordered to prepare to curtail operations and vacate the premises by the 27th of this month.

He told the Pine Cone that the only information given to him by his district manager was that the property had been bought by "a bank" and that June 27 is to be the last day of operation.

To close out the stock, there will be a reduced price sale beginning on the 15th. Starting next week, the store hours will be from 9-6, instead of the usual 9-8.

Carmel elementary schools may have new boundaries

Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor last week warned the school board that it may be necessary to alter the attendance boundaries for Carmelo, River and Woods schools in order to equalize class loads.

While emphasizing that the administration has come to no firm decision yet, Taylor said the time may come when students living in one geographic area will need to be transfered, in a block from one school to another.

He said the district will probably also need to eliminate classes that enroll only four or six students at the high school.

Taylor told the board that in order to avoid hiring additional teachers, and thus spending more money, it is necessary to avoid the undersized classes which have traditionally been a part of the district's organizational pattern.

He said many classes fall below the accepted ratio of one teacher to 25 students. At the elementary level, he explained, if there are undersized classes at the same grade level at two schools, the district is paying an average of $9000 more than necessary for the salary of the "extra" teacher.

"The Board and public should be made aware of the problems which arise in a small school district with widely separated schools when an attempt is made to equalize class loads," he stated.

Taylor also reported to the board he had recently received word from Sacramento that it is very unlikely that the State will be able to enforce financial penalties against school districts which fail to establish 180-minute single session kindergartens by September 1971.

At its March 25 meeting, the board had decided to go along with the new law and hire two additional teachers for the longer kindergarten sessions. This would cost the district approximately $20,000 in salaries, but without the change, the district was liable to a $14,000 fine from the State.

Upon learning that there is little, if any, likelihood of the State actually levying such a fine, the board voted to recind its earlier action and continue with its present double kindergarten sessions.

Board members indicated they would study the matter further if new legislation is passed making the threat of a financial penalty more imminent.

certainly of major importance to Carmel for the protection of our outstanding environment, was the next session. Another session was devoted to the problems of a City personnel system, of especial importance to Carmel Councilmen with the advent of the recently formed Carmel City Employees' Association.

The status of federal-state-municipal relations along with the problems of public works, parks and recreation was also completed the second day.

The final session was devoted to police and fire problems. Matthew Jiminez, fire chief of Hayward and national president of the Fire Fighters' Association, stressed the importance of an adequate fire fighting organization to reduce losses and insurance rates. Carmel is very fortunate in this respect.

Fred Ferguson, chief of police of Covina, who has promoted many innovations in police work, held the undivided attention of the audience.

For the final session Richard Carpenter, executive director and general counsel of the League, covered with many examples the problems presented by conflicts of interest.

All three of us left the conference fortified with a vast amount of information which we hope can be put to good use in "keeping Carmel Carmel."

ALLIANCE TO PARADE

The Alliance Francaise of the Monterey Peninsula will sponsor a parade June 14 to mark the beginning of French Week of the Old Monterey Bicentennial.

The parade will assemble at the Custom House Plaza at noon and proceed via Alvarado to the Jules Simoneau Plaza.

Leading the celebration will be the Consul General of France Mrs. Claude Batault and Mrs. Batault.

Other events of French Week will include a luncheon on Tuesday, June 16, at 12:30 p.m. in the Ballroom of the Officers Club of the Presidio.

Community commitment needed:

'Our schools must offer new kind of art education'

Eleanor J. Melvin of Carmel, executive director of the Monterey County Arts Coordinating Council, returned recently from a New York Conference on School Community Commitment on the subject: "Youth, Education and the Arts." This report was written for the Pine Cone.

"When things get this bad why worry about the arts?" asked Yale University Professor Robert J. Lifton, M.D., at the opening session of the international conference of the Associated Councils of the Arts held in St. Louis, Mo. May 20-23. The subject under discussion was "Youth, Education and the Arts."

Dr. Lifton continued, "We are living in an age of atrocity and we must respond to crisis but at the same time look to long term developments. The emerging man must maintain his own identity but be ready to borrow from many life styles. Children's tendency to openness and flux and their absurdities should not disturb us but should be taken seriously. Art is not a cure-all but a long range and fundamental path for exploring new developments."

The three-day conference, attended by 800 people, sought to give impetus to a school-community commitment to the education of all children. The contemporary school curriculum should offer a new kind of education in the arts, one that affects the educational process itself. To achieve such a goal will take a commitment of the entire community; of people, institutions and resources.

Just such a representation made up the conference attendance ranging from students of high school and college ages through teachers, art directors, performers, painters, musicians, public officials and representatives of governmental and business institutions.

Opinions ranged from the far-out demands of the New York Artists Coalition to the down-to-earth advice of Nancy Hanks, chairman of the National Council on the Arts and James E. Allen Jr., U.S. Commissioner of Education. While many imaginative ideas were expressed and actual on-going, innovative art programs in various school systems were demonstrated or described, no strong consensus was reached and many questions as to the future course of the arts in education were left unanswered.

The most important feature of the conference, in this writer's opinion, was the communication that resulted from panels of experts, small intimate discussions, demonstrations, films and a Sound-Odessey multi-media performance. This was a combination of the Lincoln String Quartet, the Camerate Woodwind Quintet, a famous St. Louis jazz bass player, Elliot "Slam" Stewart, electronic music, slides, films and light show that brought everyone cheering to his feet.

Everyone had an opportunity to express his ideas at the conference, from the student activists to G.A. McLellan, president of the Business Committee for the Arts and everyone listened.

A long white papered wall in the lobby provided a place for graffiti - used mainly by the young people but read often by their elders. Samples: "Art is a four letter word," "Prohibiting is forbidden here," "To communicate is the beginning of understanding;" "Why are all the old people around here frowning?;" "Power to the imagination;" "St. Louis has no soul because its arch is too high;" "Purgatory is the ACA conference;" "Don't look back in fear, don't look forward in anger, look around in awareness."

One came away feeling that youth has the imagination, the sense of the absurd and the courage to deal with the future if we will listen and try to understand what they say and that they would much prefer to do it by means of the arts than with rocks and explosives.

EDUCATIONAL ELEPHANTIASIS

Education is going mad in California just now. There is a veritable syndrome of educational principles sweeping the country. Even in our own community of Carmel last week we had a spate of new concepts in education. There was "The Community Seen as a School Resource Center", where one could study South American music, look at X-ray pictures, examine a human skull or simply learn to hold a fire hose. Everybody is in the act and the old teacher who sets up business with a dusty blackboard to teach students to read and write with a piece of chalk is simply not "with it".

This landslide in new principles started off with Parkinson's Law of Diminishing Returns and seems now to resemble more something out of Stephen Potter's gamesmanship. Anyone can play and every teacher who wishes to make a name for himself, invents a law, kinky, commercial and cute.

This would seem to prove George Bernard Shaw's dictum, which I might paraphrase, "He who can - teaches; he who cannot - publishes," which in turn suggests to me a good one - "The Shavian Law of Pedagogic Potential."

The joke seems to be open to endless variations and deserving now to be a subject of humor, albeit satire.

Recently the renowned interpreter of the Dead Sea Scrolls promulgated "The Mushroom Principle". Simply stated, it is that the genesis of Christianity is a mushroom. There was, it appears, a pre-Biblical cult of mystic exaltation, achieved through various intoxicants, particularly mushrooms, which was the precursor of Christian belief. Now all I think that such a thesis convincingly proves, is that the next time you order "Omelette aux Champignons" from Yvon Nopert's Escargot on Mission, watch out, you might be eating your last supper. Indeed under its hallucinatory effects you might be eating an "Omlette aux Chretiens!"

Got the idea? It's endless fun.

Another best selling principle, named after its co-author, who is a professor of education in California, is called the "Peter Principle" and is succinctly stated. It is that "in a hierarchy every employee tends to rise to his level of incompetence" or more simply, that if a man can do a job well, he is promoted until he can't.

The idea is of course, both familiar and jocular, if we look around us: presidents of corporations who can't steal school principals who can't spell, directors who can't make movies and civil servants who make war.

Once you have thought of a good law, there is no limit to the fun you can have with it. You can go on to compulsive incompetence, higher incompetence, incompetence plus luck equals competence. Then there is Lateral Incompetence, a corollary of the main theme, in which an employee is moved sideways to another job, where he is at least incompetent.

To show how easy it is to be a professional pundit, I give you one, "Sidone's Law of Linguistic Leprosy." You take and rewrite the grammar of the English language and keep dropping off any rules of syntax that are difficult of application.

Think of the repercussions of such a law. It puts an end, on the one hand, to communist manifestoes maintained by dazzlingly sophisticated semantics and on the other, the capitalist culture of wordy Madison Avenue. It sees the last of "stream - of - consciousness" novels, subtle dialectic, political cant and apologetic apologetics. But it leaves us with communication plain and simple.

The millenium under such a law would be something like this. The scene - the President's office, White House, circa 2000. The hot line from Moscow buzzes. The call is unscrambled and decoded. It runs, "Nuclear holocaust imminent. Must confer with your Commander-in-Chief. Where is the President?" And the simplistic answer, "Gawn fishin."

Or something like this. Orderly running up to H.Q. in some future brush fire war. "Sir, the General is undergoing a severe gas attack." Answer, "Tell him to take a teaspoonful of bicarbonate and half a glass of water."

So you see that under my Law of Linguistic Leprosy, education would become simple again, communication reduced to stark essentials, and Carmel Charivari ------ ? Perish the thought.

School board finally agrees on calendar

Scratch those plans for a long, looooong Labor Day Weekend trip in September, the trip that was going to run all the way through Admission Day on September 9.

After a somewhat greater than usual hassle, the Carmel School board adopted the 1970-71 school calendar last week, and it looks like this:

Tuesday, September 1 -- teachers report for work.

Wednesday, September 2 -- First Day of School.

Monday, September 7 -- Labor Day holiday.

Tuesday, September 8 -- Regular school day.

Wednesday, September 9 -- Admission Day holiday.

After this in-again, out-again beginning, things settle down to a familiar routine. The last day of school is June 11, providing 180 teaching days for the school year.

Faces serious charge for highway death of soldier

Mrs. Dorothy Luce of Los Robles Road, Carmel Valley, will be arraigned in Superior Court tomorrow morning on charges of felony hit-and-run driving involving the death of a Fort Ord soldier.

Mrs. Luce pleaded not guilty to the charge before Monterey Municipal Judge Russell Zaches Friday morning and waived her right to a preliminary hearing.

The charge stems from an accident last Thursday night, when Wayne B. Drayton, 20, of Sacramento, was killed, and his companion, Phillip A. Caltagerone, 18, of Rockford, Ill., seriously injured while walking along Highway 1 near Carmel Valley Road.

The California Highway Patrol said the two soldiers were walking along the southbound lane shoulder when they were struck by Mrs. Luce's automobile at about 9 p.m.

Officers said she left the scene of the accident, and then reported it two hours later in a phone call from her attorney's office.

Goepfert to assume Boy Scout post in Germany

Robert E. Goepfert, program director for the Monterey Bay Area Counci, Boy Scouts of America, will join the staff of the Transatlantic Boy Scout Council with headquarters in Heidelberg, Germany, beginning July 15, announced Scout Executive Frank Buck. He will serve the district of Weisbaden, Germany.

Goepfert retired a lieutenant colonel in the United States Air Force in 1966 and joined the local Scout staff and was assigned as Peninsula District Scout Executive. In 1969 he was appointed program director. He has also been serving as council camp director.

Carmel and Pebble Beach homes, gardens on display

A wide variety of homes and gardens have been chosen for the Annual Garden Tour of Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. They range from the charming intimacy of the Carmel homes where the gardens seem to flow into the house and become a part of it, to the large Pebble Beach estates some of which are set with the background of the wooded landscape of the Monterey Peninsula and the famed 17-Mile Drive.

Seven Carmel gardens and four in Pebble Beach have been included in the Tour this year, as well as the renowned Robert Louis Stevenson School where the tea will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. the afternoon of the Tour. At the school the Erdman Memorial Chapel will be open to visitors.

A typical garden of old Carmel will be on view at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Dyer, where shade plants as well as those that thrive in sunny areas find a congenial setting. At the home of Major General and Mrs. Edwin K. Wright a secluded lot with a beautiful ocean view provides a setting for a profusion of color in azaleas and rhododendrons.

A feature of the home of the Reverend and Mrs. H. M. M. Nicholas is a well-tended rose garden. Inside the living room visitors may see the seven-panelled needlepoint screen which is the creation of Mrs. Nicholas.

Near the Carmel Mission Basilica is the historic home of Mrs. Lloyd Tevis, Sr., where a feeling of old California is carried out by the ancient Spanish Cork Oak which overhangs an interesting 16th Century font. At the rear of the house a steep bank is covered with a profusion of flowers and a rock stairway leads to the fruit orchard.

The home as well as the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gordon Greene will be on view, where the arches of the garden have a Mediterranean feeling borrowed from the Mission San Juan Bautista.

A friendly and intimate garden will be on view at the home of Mrs. Thomas A. Roper and orchids everywhere bring the garden indoors as well as out.

Carmel Point is represented in the charming small house of Mrs. Frank C. Kilpatrick, built to take full advantage of the magnificent views of the ocean and Point Lobos. The terraces are framed with very low boxwood hedges, cleverly solving the problem of building on sand dunes of the area.

THE HOME OF Reverend and Mrs. H. M. M. Nicholas is one of the stops on the Annual Garden Tour of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services. The tour will take place Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (photo by Roger Fremier).

The house and garden of Mr. Aime Michaud on 17-Mile Drive heads the list of those on display in Pebble Beach. The house, built in 1927, has been remodeled by the present owner to retain its original beauty, including the dark oak plank floors and the original Mexican design fireplace. On display also will be the gourmet chef's kitchen with gleaming copper utensils hanging from their hooks. In the dining room a 400 year old mirror from a mission in Mexico hangs over a 200 year old French Provincial chest.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Love, also on 17-Mile Drive, a log cabin built at least 60 years ago still stands on the property and is now used by Mrs. Love as a studio. Inside visitors may see the old stone fireplace and an old chest made of eucalyptus wood. The breakfast room has an aviary, and orchid plants grown by the owner in his greenhouse appear throughout the house. The fuchsias are of special interest, inasmuch as some are the first ever to be brought to the Monterey Peninsula 40 or 50 years ago. From the deck there stretches a sweep of lawn and walkway to the beach where sea otters may be seen feeding and playing in the Cove.

A restful garden provides the setting for the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Blair Hackney where trees make a welcome environment for shade-loving plants.

By popular request, the garden of Colonel and Mrs. Allan Griffin is open again on this year's tour. In addition to the several lovely rose gardens furnishing the setting for the house, a new rose garden will be on view planted exclusively with roses from Ireland. Himalayan rhododendrons and white tree azaleas are unique, and lilies and dahlias give a color accent to the formal garden. Boxwood-bordered walks, centering a small pool and backed by an English yew hedge enhance the appeal of this home which is reminiscent of the early English homes in Virginia.

Tickets for the Garden Tour at $3.50 which includes the gate fee into Pebble Beach and the tea during the afternoon at the School, may be secured from M P V S members, or by calling the ticket chairman at 372-1619, or 624-6938. Tickets will also be available at the various homes on the day of the Tour, and at the Pebble Beach gates.

If there are enough reservations, additional transportation for the bus tour will be available from Hacienda Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove.

As in former years, bus transportation from Carmel for the entire tour will be available, leaving at noon and returning at 5 p.m. from the Carmel Foundation, Lincoln and Eighth.

CARMEL CLOSE-UP: HUGH BAYLESS

Faced with daily task of doing something about Carmel's problems

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Carmel-by-the-Sea is a long, long way from Iquique, Chile where Hugh Bayless was born, the son of a mining engineer, on October 3, 1917. It took a while and some doing, but 45 years later the boy who had moved 22 times by the time he was 16 years old came "home."

Hugh is, of course, the City Clerk and City Administrator of Carmel and perhaps because of his mobile youth and years in the Army, his feelings for his adopted home rival those of the most enthusiastic Carmelite. The difference is that Hugh, in his official capacities, is not only aware of Carmel's unique heritage and future problems, but is faced with the daily task of doing something about them.

He brings to his office a background that, although varied, is thoroughly steeped in business management and personal relationships. Educated at the University of Houston where he majored in Business Administration, Hugh also studied electrical engineering. In 1940 he became a Color Sergeant in the U.S. Calvalry stationed on the Texas-Mexican border. When war was declared, he became attached to the 485th Bomb Group as a Sergeant Major in the U.S. Air Force.

BUSINESS

After the war, he drew on his business training and his knowledge and love of photography and owned and managed a commercial photography business in Houston until he was recalled to active duty during the Korean War. This Army stint, ranking as a First Lieutenant, included the position of Personnel Officer at Fort Hood, Texas, where he worked at processing 20,000 reservists.

Once again, the end of the war saw Hugh back in the photographic business, in such positions as manager of the Camera Exchange, and Industrial Sales Manager and Sales Manager for large companies in Northern California.

On route to Korea in 1952, Hugh and his wife Charlsie—affectionately known as "Kitty "because no one can pronounce her name," came to the Peninsula. "We took one look around the Monterey Peninsula, looked at each other and said 'we're home.' " While Hugh served in Korea, Kitty worked as a sportswear buyer at Holman's. Then, when Hugh returned, they settled here.

Business opportunities called them away from their chosen spot, but apparently the desire to return to Carmel was strong. While on a business trip to Carmel, Hugh ran into an old friend, Art Plaxton. They lunched together, and Art casually mentioned that he was looking for a City Clerk for Carmel. Half-jokingly, Hugh quipped, "Well, don't look any further; I've been wanting to come back to Carmel."

Shortly thereafter, he, Kitty and their son, Keith, now 15, did just that.

Hugh considers himself something of a rarity in city governments. "The majority of City Clerks in California are little old ladies," he reports, having recently been amidst them at a City Clerk's conference. "They follow the hallowed tradition of lady postmistresses," he explains with a touch of irony. The position entails acting as secretary to the City Council and keeping their minutes, being custodian of the records of the city and keeper of the Great Seal.

As City Administrator, however, Hugh's position has nothing old-ladyish about it. It is very much in the hub of running the city. Among other things, it is the City Administrator's task to make recommendations to the City Council on salary and budgetary allocations and to help originate and draft many of the ordinances that eventually become the laws that keep Carmel a functioning city.

"A person, or a group of people, or a Councilman comes in with a problem that has to be dealt with," says Hugh, "and if it's a genuine cause, worthy of attention, an ordinance is drafted." He works closely with the City Attorney on the legality of the proposed law, and also keeps in mind the need for and feasability of the ordinance. "Carmel has very few ordinances that aren't enforced," he adds, and says that no one wants to clutter up the books with unworkable, unnecessary rules. "Our goal is to protect what we have, to prevent abuses of what was traditionally not abused."

GOAL TO PROTECT

Therein lies the key to Hugh's job and, indeed, to the work of the entire government of Carmel. Keeping in mind that Carmel is a twentieth-century, ongoing city, faced with all the manifold problems of its time, the government must also seek to preserve the unique traditions of the city.

"More and more outsiders are moving into Carmel; more and more businesses are owned by people from outside who don't know the traditions of Carmel; who see something they like and immediately want to exploit it." By keeping one step ahead of potential exploiters and by drafting the laws to prevent exploitation, Hugh is one of the foremost protectors of the city's charms.

As part of this steadfast determination to preserve Carmel, a Business License Review Board was established recently. It serves as an indoctrination course for prospective business owners, explaining to them the regulations governing their business and, at the same time, giving them a lesson in Carmel tradition.

It isn't always a grim business, this guardianship of Carmel; it has its humorous touches. Hugh once sat over a cup of coffee and chanced to overhear a tourist from New Jersey expounding to his wife: "I'm going to come back here and make a million dollars," he bragged. "Why, these people don't even know about neon signs!" Gently, Hugh corrected the man; Carmelites did indeed know about neon lights; that was why there were none.

With monotonous regularity, Hugh is offered an enticing proposition: man, visiting Carmel Beach, notices that there is a certain amount of uncollected debris thereon. He presents himself in Hugh's office and announces that he will undertake—and guarantee—to keep the beach free of refuse if he is granted a concession to sell hot dogs and soft drinks on the beach. Sadly, he never seems to understand why Hugh isn't buying his proposition.

BIGGEST PROBLEM

It is no secret that Carmel's biggest problem and most serious challenge is in the form of traffic and how best to handle it. Hugh has heard all the proposals, and they all resolve themselves into a great big "if." If the Hatton Canyon Scenic Highway is built, if underground parking lots are put in beneath San Carlos, if trams are used to shuttle tourists, if the city incorporates additional territory and erects gates, if Ocean Avenue is turned into a pedestrian mall...if there were money enough, land enough, support enough, something would be done. In the meantime, Carmel is faced with the problem of needing the tourists and at the same time ensuring that their autos don't strangle the city into one horrid traffic jam.

"The business people feel the city ought to shoulder the entire burden of traffic and adequate parking; the Council feels that while it would be willing to work with the businessmen, they must take the initiative in solving the problem," says Hugh. He says that over 1,000 cars enter Carmel daily, driven by people who work in the city. They either park in the residential areas and make the homeowners unhappy or they play "musical cars" and move from one legal space to another every two hours, thereby taking up the precious spaces available for tourists in the downtown area. Then, he continues, the businessmen scream there isn't enough parking space for tourists.

Tourists, traffic and hippies all really constitute one Carmel problem. Both the tourists and hippies are "outsiders," disliked by the Carmelites. "There is an increasing number of residents, though still small, who feel anti young people," says Hugh. "But we can't do what they'd like—tell them to get out of town...it would be unconstitutional."

The hippie problem Hugh considers "partly an emotional and potentially a real problem." On the real side, he feels that an "invasion" of 3,000 hippies would create a serious police problem. However, he writes it off, for the time being, as an annoyance now, but one that could become a real problem by dint of sheer numbers.

"The character of Carmel has been changing since I got here," he says. The average age of Carmelites is increasing steadily as more people are drawn here to retire. There are only a handful—barely more than 100—of school-age children living within the city limits. And the older people are the ones who are anti-hippie and anti-tourist.

"What they don't realize," Hugh states, "is that the tourists are paying well over one-half the cost of running the city. The residents are getting better police service because of the tourists than they would if the police were serving only Carmelites.

FORCE CUTBACK

"We would have to cut the city's work force by two-thirds and drastically cut back all of the services and raise property taxes if the tourists 'went away' as some people wish they would. Carmel's share of the sales and room taxes furnishes 60 per cent of the total city budget. The businesses, hotels, galleries, restaurants would have to close; very few survive on local business alone. We could not have the Carmel everyone is trying to preserve without the tourists."

Hugh, who gets to his office by 7:30 a.m. "to get some work done before the phone starts ringing at 9:00," also averages three nights a week attending to city business.

Steeped in his work as he is, Hugh "unwinds" before going to sleep by reading the endless succession of publications dealing with urban problems and their solutions.

He no longer has the time for photography, once an outlet as well as a business, and leaves the darkroom work to his eldest son, Scott. But he does play the guitar a bit, and carves wonderful knife handles out of wood or antlers. Most of the time, he is too busy for hobbies.

"I love my job. There are a lot of frustrations but a great deal of satisfaction. I feel that I'm doing something that needs doing and I feel I'm doing it well," he says, sounding very much the man who has at last come home.

Petpourri

BY JUDITH EISNER

The Memorial Day weekend and two spells of nice warm weather all indicate that summer is on its way. During the months to come, your dog will require a little extra attention to ensure his enjoyment of the "long, hot summer."

Nature intended for dogs to carry a coat of hair the year 'round. Only our selective -- and often foolish -- breeding policies have produced dogs with extremes of coats. Such as the Poodle. In earlier, simpler times, Nature created dogs with coats that well-suited to the climate in which the dog lived. Thus, the herding dogs, who had to be able to tolerate winter snow and sleet as well as summer sun while tending their master's flocks, developed a coat that was both warm and water-repellent and which also provided insulation against the worst of the sun's rays in warmer weather.

Unless yours is a dog which is regularly clipped all through the year, the biggest mistake you can make is having your dog clipped or shaved to "cool him off" for the summer. Long-haired dogs, when shaved, are stripped of their natural insulation and protection. As a result, they are far more susceptible to sunstroke and to all the parasites that tend to make the summer months a misery for dogs.

Shorn of their coats, dogs can literally sunburn, especially since their skin is fairly tender and unused to the elements. An added cruelty to the shaven dog is the definite psychological torment his "naked" condition creates. Perfectly happy, well-adjusted pets have become psychological wrecks after a well-intentioned bout with the clipper. They begin to hide behind the furniture, slink, cringe and, in general, act mortified at their ludicruous appearance. It may sound a little far-fetched, but studies document it and we have seen one of the sled dog breeds, a lovely, outgoing dog all year, turn into a mean-tempered, tail-between-the-legs cur after his misguided mistress shaved him.

All the little pests that are tolerable in the winter months seem to become magnified with the hot days of summer. Suddenly the woods and fields seem to abound with ticks who are just waiting to latch onto your poor dog. It may interest you to know that ticks are attracted to perspiration; they may lie in wait for years until the perspiration of animal or human triggers a response to drop off their perch and bite. Certain varieties of tick are more dangerous than others as they spread Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. There were more than the normal number of such cases last year, so it pays to be especially vigilant this year.

Every dog who spends any time outdoors, be it in your safe backyard or in the field, should be checked each evening for ticks. Pay special attention to shorter-furred area behind and in the ears as ticks find these easier hunting grounds. To remove a tick, saturate it with alcohol or acetone (nail polish remover). It may take quite a soaking before it releases its hold. The solvent should be squeezed directly onto the tick from a cotton ball. Avoid handling the tick; use tweezers. Never forcefully pull them out, for the head breaks off and remains imbedded in the dog's flesh where it may cause an infection. Once the tick is loosened, pluck it off and either burn it or flush it away.

Flea collars, if renewed every three months, will kill ticks. However, it takes as long as a week to do this. We would rather not have our dog running around with ticks on him while we lazily wait for the flea collar to do its work. The sooner the pest is eliminated, the better.

With fleas, however, the collars work quickly and efficiently. During the summer, they are a blessing to the dog and cat owner. But certain precautions are necessary. If your dog goes swimming or gets hosed off now and then, the collar must be removed as long as the dog is wet. Water speeds the release of the insecticide they contain and the increased dose may have ill effects on the dog. With cats, there is always the danger of strangulation if the animal climbs trees or fences -- as cats will. So you must decide whether a flea spray or powder isn't perhaps a safer solution to the flea problem on your cat.

A once-a-week spraying of your pet's sleeping area will get rid of any uninvited guests that have dropped off his coat while he sleeps, and will prevent re-infestation.

Water is so vital to all life that we tend to take it for granted. Dogs and cats must have water to live. People still believe that cats who are fed milk don't need water; they do. And you can be sure that they're getting it somewhere if you aren't providing it.

During the summer, access to a constant supply of cool, fresh water is essential. It isn't good enough to fill a tin pan one day and leave it, standing, until it evaporates. Water kept outdoors should be placed in the shade and refilled at least once during the day. At night, the water pan should be taken inside, scrubbed and dried for use the next day. Indoor water pans should be cleaned at least once daily and refilled whenever necessary.

Your pet will need more water during the hot weather, but he may refuse to drink dirty or sun-warmed water. Insects in the water certainly do him no good, either. An inexpensive crockery bowl will keep the water cooler than a metal container. An auto-matic self-watering device like the Lix-it, that attaches directly to an outdoor faucet is a wonderful idea and your dog will quickly learn how to use it. It guarantees fresh, clean water all the time.

Grooming is especially important during the summer months because your pet is naturally shedding his coat. Not only with a daily brushing cut down on the loose hairs on everything, but it will make the dog more comfortable. It will also give you a chance to check his skin for "hot spots" or summer exzema, a rash-like fungal infection that plagues thousands of dogs in the hot weather. Prompt attention, including soothing lotions and itch-preventing medication prescribed by the veterinarian will check this problem before it spreads and destroys the dog's coat.

Ideality to Reality

The founding of Carmel

PART V OF A SERIES:

BY MICHAEL ORTH

The flight in the summer of 1910 was the beginning of the end for Sterling's Panjandrumship at Carmel. In the next few years he finally capitulated to the McGowan-Austin forces and stopped trying to impose his views on the theater. He wrote to his old friend Blanche Partington, San Francisco drama critic, in April of 1912 claiming that he had "crayfished" again in the Forest Theater fight because he did not care to attack a woman, but in any case by this time he had ceased trying to bring the Spirit of Bohemia to the Carmel forests.[42] His marriage to Carrie Rand Sterling, which had been shaken many times by his infidelity, broke in 1914 on a particularly outrageous affair, and he left Carmel permanently the following year for Greenwich Village, where he hoped to begin a new and more successful career. Mary Austin, the other pioneer at Carmel, had ceased to live regularly there by 1910 or so, as I mentioned earlier. She travelled widely, and after 1916 moved permanently to Santa Fé, where a new colony was forming.

Carmel-by-the-Sea continued, of course, without Sterling and Mary Austin. The arrival of these two had led to an appreciation of the rocky coast and pine forests of Carmel by other artists, and Carmel began, paradoxically, to achieve the commercial success its founders desired through the uncommercial influence of San Francisco Bohemians fleeing what Lewis Mumford calls the "paleotechnic city" in a search for the last chance at America's rural dream.

A VIABLE COLONY

Ten years after Sterling first settled in the valley, Carmel was left to a new generation. It proved to be a viable colony, and still continues its existence as a small resort known for cultural and leisure facilities. It has also shown its continuing vitality by giving birth to a daughter colony, Big Sur, farther south along the coast, a settlement which has taken on the lonely romance that Carmel once had and which shows signs, as Carmel did in 1920, of losing the privacy and undisturbed beauty which originally created it.

Carmel continued to try to keep its original freedom from the business civilization surrounding it, as Perry Newberry's often noted platform for his 1929 campaign for city trustee shows. Newberry promised the voters:

> Believing that what 9,999 towns out of 10,000 want is just what Carmel shouldn't have, I am a candidate for trustee on the platform, DON'T BOOST. I am making a spirited campaign to win by asking those who disagree to vote against me.
> DON'T VOTE FOR PERRY NEWBERRY:
> If you hope to see Carmel become a city.
> If you want its growth boosted.
> If you desire its commercial success.
> If concrete street pavements represent your civic ambitions.
> If you think a glass factory is of greater importance than a sand dune, or a millionaire than an artist, or a mansion than a little brown cottage.
> If you truly want Carmel to become a boosting, hustling, wideawake, lively metropolis, and he won.[43] So did Bert Herron, who was elected mayor in 1938 on a similar platform.[44] Of course, Perry Newberry was a more or less reformed San Francisco advertising man, and Bert Herron spent more time selling Carmel real estate than he did writing, so the apparently nonconformist planks of their campaigns ought perhaps to be considered a part of the tourist Carmel that rose with the dozens of Hansel and Gretel cottages designed by architect Hugh W. Comstock in the same period, and which still litter the Carmel landscape.
> DON'T VOTE FOR PERRY NEWBERRY.

If we remember Robert V. Hines' conclusion that the years of the First World War saw the greatest number of utopian colonies formed in California of any period in its history, then the founding of Carmel can be seen as a case of historical determinism — culture on the Pacific slope had reached the stage that caused many groups to break away from the main stream and form societies of their own, one of them the artists' haven of Carmel.[45] Carmel was a part of the general trend also in its rapid decay after 1915; Outland changed to honeymooners' resort in approximately the ten years which Hines estimated as the average lifespan of secular colonies in California. During those ten years the idealistic utopia of two distinctive American writers, George Sterling and Mary Austin, served as a bridge between the ideal art of the 1890's and the new realism of the 1920's.

This is the final installment of a series based on an article by Michael Orth which appeared in the September, 1969 Quarterly of the California Historical Society. We are indebted to the Society and the author, who is on the staff of the English Department at California Polytechnic College at San Luis Obispo for their kind permission to reprint the article. We also thank the staff of the Harrison Memorial Library for their permission to use photographs from their valuable Nixon collection to illustrate the series. We hope you enjoyed them. THE EDITORS.

Talks, slides, music, at Town House in June

A variety of Wednesday afternoon programs will be presented in June at Town House, Lincoln at Eighth, to Carmel Foundation members and potential members. Each program starts at 2:30 p.m., with tea served afterwards, at about 3:30 p.m.

On June 10 the program is a panel of local citizens who were visiting in the east following the turmoil of the first week in May. They will report on what they saw and heard and then invite questions.

Slides and comments on the people and countryside of Ethiopia will be presented June 17 by Mrs. George Dietterle who has recently lived in that country.

On June 24, young artists from the Hidden Valley Music Seminars will present an intimate concert.

The Town House exhibit for June will feature paintings by the members of Miss Margarte Roberts' Classes, held in the Town House studio each Tuesday afternoon.

In the spirit of neighborliness, the Carmel community has made possible this unique non-profit organization. Members are those who make a contribution to the Carmel Foundation and may be of any age, although the programs and services are designed for the older person.

Volunteers contribute their time and talents in teaching classes,presenting programs, arranging flowers, and baking cookies and cakes for the teas. A special need exists for volunteers who can drive members to medical appointments when they have no other means for transportation.

The Foundation has carried on its work in Carmel for 20 years.

New Arrivals

The newest addition to Carmel is Ankica Frieda Gojanovic, born to Mr. and Mrs. Josip Gojanovic on May 25 at Community Hospital.

Daimler wins top prize at Pebble Beach

Los Angeles cosmetics manufacturer J. B. Nethercutt picked up his second consecutive Gwenn Graham trophy for best of show at the 20th annual Concours at Pebble Beach on Saturday.

Nethercutt won this year with a 1931 Daimler Royal "Double Six." The winning Daimler, a 12 cylinder Franklin brown and black limousine which originally cost $14,000.

In 1969, Nethercutt won the first Graham trophy, named in honor of the late publicity director at Pebble Beach, with a 1934 Duesenberg J. DC Phaeton.

The winning Daimler is one of a stable of cars owned by Nethercutt who has resumed his hobby of classic car restoration after selling his original collection to Bill Harrah a few years ago.

Robert A. Davies, Belvedere, again won the Reserve Trophy for second best of show with his 1934 Rolls Royce Phaeton II. The black drop head coupe was given the same honor in last year's Pebble Beach concours. Davies is also a past winner of the Lucius Beebe memorial trophy for best Rolls of show at Pebble Beach.

This year's Beebe award was given to Mr. and Mrs. D. Power Boothe, Jr., Sausalito. The Boothe car, a 1964 Rolls-Royce PV touring limousine was chosen over 21 pre-and-post World war II Rolls' entered.

With only 27,000 miles recorded, the Boothe car offers the luxuries of a custom fitted interior bar, a vanity, two radios, and of course, air-conditioning. New it cost $35,000.

This year's Pebble Beach Concours attracted some 4,500 spectators who contributed over $5,000 to benefit the Community Hospital Auxiliary of the Monterey Peninsula.

The full-color concours poster, created by Carmel artist and cartoonist Eldon Dedini, a monthly contributor to Playboy, New Yorker and Esquire was purchased for $350, the money also going to the auxiliary.

As is the custom at Pebble Beach, champagne was served throughout the afternoon to the judges, a tradition that was originated by Lucius Beebe and that has been perpetuated by his long-time associate Charles Clegg.

Exhibitors and judges were guests of Del Monte Properties Company at a pre-concours cocktail party and many stayed over Saturday evening for the annual Concours Roc at the Beach and Tennis Club.

AMERICAN PRESIDENT Lines held a seminar on fall cruises for Monterey Peninsula agents recently and more than 40 gathered outdoors in balmy weather at Hotel La Playa. Zantman to show works of two artists

Zantman Galleries will feature the work of two California artists beginning Saturday and continuing through the 26th. Richard Robertson, a local painter, and Dorothy Cutter from the Morro Bay area will exhibit their work here simultaneously.

Robertson, who paints in the realistic style, is originally from Oregon and has attended both the University of Oregon and the Art School Center in Los Angeles. Most of his works are highly detailed, motionless glimpses of both natural and man-made structure.

He is very concerned with the use of light and shadow, and some of his paintings are suggestive of the quiet chimera which occurs in Andrew Wyeth's work.

In contrast, Dorothy Cutter paints with an eye toward color, pattern, and personal relationship. Most of her work depicts indoor scenes, spiked occasionally with figures who blend with their surroundings.

Perspective, realism, and light source are of secondary importance to her, compared to the pattern and form of a chair, for example, as it asserts itself against a clashing lamp or a pervasive wallpaper. In the general tradition of Matisse, Gaugin, even of Francis Bacon, her work offers the highly personalized view of things "as they seem to each other."

Miss Cutter has attended the Maryland Art Institute in Baltimore, the Corcoran Museum School, the Abbot Art School, and the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland.

The course is open to adults and to children of junior and senior high school age. No previous knowledge of special handwriting or script is required. The $30.00 fee includes the costs of all materials.

Interested persons are asked to pre-register by calling 624-9171.

Local artists offer Museum workshops

Registrations are being taken now for Young Peoples Art workshops to be conducted by Carmel area artists this summer at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Freedom of expression and creativity will be stressed in the courses to be led by Bob Skiles, Jean Hofsas and Clarence Bates. There will also be a discussion of art history based on the problems of man as depicted by the artist through the ages. The latter will be taught by Laurie Carter who is currently teaching art history classes at the museum and at the Carmel Adult School.

Mr. Skiles of Big Sur, who teaches at Tularcitos school, will direct the classes for children from 6 to 13 years of age from 10 a.m. until noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays. There will be instruction in painting, sculpture, collage and papier mache.

Mr. Bates, well known Carmel painter and teacher, will conduct the classes for young people between 13 and 18. The schedule has been planned to begin at 11 a.m. with a folk singing and guitar session during the lunch hour followed by painting, collage, sculpture or creative stitchery from noon until 3 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays and from 10 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

The first session will be from July 7 to July 25 and the second session will be from July 28 to August 15. The fee for younger applicants is $20 and for the teenagers, $30. Registration may be made at the museum, 529 Pacific Street or by calling 372-5477 for information. Classes will be limited to 20.

Recent Churchill Acrylics at Seaside

A one man showing of the most recent acrylic paintings by Carmel artist Lillian Churchill is now showing at the Seaside City Hall.

Some of these paintings reflect her interest in the theme of "Time and Space" expressed through symbols as early as the Sumerian and as recent as the computer. Very architectural in design, they show a considerable sense of humor—as in one of the ancient scribe reading a long scroll. The scroll is the Dow Jones averages.

Before coming to the Peninsula, Mrs. Churchill, the widow of the New York Times Hollywood correspondent, had a long and successful career as a costume designer for Twentieth Century Fox Studios. Known as "Rusty," Mrs. Churchill now resides in Carmel and was an original board member of the Carmel American Federation of the Arts now the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

She studied art in New York as well as with Du Casse, Abel Warshawski, George Post and others and has shown both in group and one man shows on the Peninsula. Recently, she had a one man show in Lafayette.

She feels that she was perhaps most of all influenced by Ralph Du Casse and Fritz Faiss from whom she learned the fascinating and ancient technique of encaustic, the medium used in the murals of Pompeii.

Bleich moves to Highlands studio

Marine artist George J. Bleich has moved his gallery to a new location in the Carmel Highlands at Fern Circle and Pine Way, a three minute walk from the Highlands Inn. The studio-gallery has been operated in the past by such notable artists as Joshua Meders and Bennet Bradbury.

"There is a beautiful mood undercurrent in the Carmel Highlands," Bleich said. "It heightens one's artistic sensitivity and sense of wonder. After many a well-traveled year of searching, we've chosen a place to make our home, where the people are wonderfully warm and the marine subject matter without equal."

"PASSING THUNDERSTORM," dry brush watercolor by Ray Swanson; 16 x 30, 1970.

Swanson one-man show at Petite Galerie

La Petite Galerie will offer a one-man show Saturday and Sunday, featuring the work of Ray Swanson. Swanson has won many awards recently for his paintings, including First Awards in Watercolor at the All California Juried Art Exhibit at San Bernardino, the Death Valley Invitational Art Exhibit, and the Juried Art Exhibit at Fontana.

In addition, he has received a Second Award in Oil at the Death Valley exhibit and Third Awards for Watercolor at the All-Western Invitational Art Exhibit at San Diego and for Oil at the Five County Juried Art Exhibit at San Bernardino.

Originally from a farm in South Dakota, Swanson's subject matter is heavily rural. Although only 30 years old, he is already recognized as an accomplished painter in the realistic style, especially in his control of light and shadow.

He is self-taught and has been drawing constantly since an early age. His development in watercolor, oil and pencil have spurred many art critics to predict a bright future for him.

Lately, Swanson has shown a growing concern for the depiction of the Southwest, including many works dealing with the Indian and the Cowboy.

He makes his home in the San Bernardino Mountains, where he has lived and painted for the past eight years.

Pat Cunningham to demonstrate

Patricia Cunningham will give an oil painting demonstration at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Seaside City Hall.

This distinguished Carmel artist, a fourth generation Californian, is well known in the contemporary American art field. She has had many one-man shows. The Western Museum Director's Association sponsored a rotating exhibition of her paintings at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco; Santa Barbara Museum, Portland Art Museum, Richmond Art Center, Washington State College Museum and the Art Barn, Salt Lake Cit, Her painting, "Flower Market in Paris," is in the permanent collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Miss Cunningham was the first woman president of the Carmel Art Association in the mid-fifties. This month she has a one-man show in the Beardsley Room at the Association's gallery in Carmel. Friday evening she will use a Spanish theme when demonstrating the open color technique.

Adopt Class Schedule for Carmel Adult School

The Carmel Adult School will offer the following subjects during its summer session from June 22 through July 31:

Art, English as a second language, pottery, sewing, writing for publication, and adult band.

There will be a $5 fee charged for high school graduates and persons over 21. Classes will not be started if there are less than 15 registrants.

This program was approved last week by the Carmel school board, which also authorized the district to make final arrangements for summer classes in instrumental music, driver training and computer math at Carmel High School, and classes in reading, mathematics, science, individual projects and music at Tularcitos and River schools.

The computer math course was a last-minute addition at the high school. Cintra Inc., a subsidiary of Physics International Company of Mountain View, will pay the salaries of two math teachers as part of a field test for the computer program.

The school board also voted to give teachers an opportunity, as was done last summer, to develop materials for individualized instruction at special curriculum workshops.

As was done last year, teachers will be asked to submit project proposals which they will complete under the direction of their principals either from June 15-26 or August 17-28.

Fifty project proposals will be approved, and teachers will receive $250 for the 10-day work schedule.

OTHER MATTERS

In other action, the school board:

1. Authorized the district to proceed with plans to establish its own continuation high school as required by State law. In the past, the district has joined with Monterey and Pacific Grove school districts to operate a joint continuation school program.

2. Accepted the resignations of Edwin L McCurry, principal of River School, and Marilyn Nettleship, home economics teacher at Carmel Middle School. McCurry is resigning to establish a private school in the Palo Colorato area, while Miss Nettleship will move to Massachusetts after her marriage this month.

3. Hired Mrs. Suzanne McGuane, a graduate of Alvernia College in Reading, Pa., as a reading teacher at Carmel Middle School. She will be a one-year replacement for Jo Brazell, who is taking a sabbatical leave of absence for the school year 1970-71.

4. Heard a report from Miss Brazell and several of her Streamlined Reading students who attended the recent International Reading Association Conference in Anaheim.

5. Authorized purchase of a reserve school bus for approximately $2600.

Stars to golf here for charity July 4 weekend

Hollywood film and television stars, sports professionals, and celebrities will take part in the Clint Eastwood Invitational Celebrity Tennis Tournament over the July 4th weekend. Proceeds will go to the local National Council on Alcoholism under the auspices of the newly-formed Women's Division, Monterey Peninsula. The star-studded event will take place at Del Monte's Beach and Tennis Club at Pebble Beach on the 17-Mile Drive.

Tickets are now on sale at the following outlets: Carmel Sports Shop, Community Services Offices at Monterey Peninsula College, Monterey Sports Shop, Beach and Tennis Club, Del Monte Lodge Drug Store and the 7–11 Grocery at Del Monte Lodge, Stan Lisk Sports Shop in Salinas, and the Carmel Valley Racquet Club.

General admission prices are $4.00 for Friday's matches and $5 for Saturday and Sunday play. Until June 15th a combination three-day ticket may be purchased for $10. Student and military rate is $2.50 per day. A few boxes are still available on all three courts.

sunrise..... to Sunset

dorothy bowman .

Memorial Day concluded a very active agenda for May, and June is just around that proverbial corner to usher in our second "Artists in Action" program. This event will be presented in the studios, patio and Sunset Theater, on Saturday from 1 to 6 p.m., at the Sunset Cultural Center, 8th and San Carlos.

Our April 26 program was most successful, and as the months go by, our goal is to broaden the entire scope of both our Fine Arts and Performing Arts Programs by staffing the Center with highly creative and skilled artisans, both as instructors and as professional artists. "Artists in Action" will serve as an introduction to our new programs as they develop at the Center.

To highlight a few of the many activities on the agenda for Saturday afternoon, Studios 1 through 11 will be open, with the resident artists performing their particular arts and crafts, ranging from painting, etching and lithography, to woodcut and serigraphy. Weaving, stitchery, and macrame will be conducted by guest artists. Of very special interest will be a demonstration of spinning and "carding the yarn."

Our performing arts will also share the limelight with the Music Appreciation hour, known as the Record Collectors Hour, at 2 p.m., and the drama presentation of an original play based on the Bicentennial theme. Folk dancing and folksinging will be featured on the Patio, with a Punch and Judy Show in Room 5 for the younger set.

There will be something for everyone at Sunset on June 6. These are but a few of the highlights featured during this very exciting day of "Artists in Action". Call 624-3996 for further information, and bring your friends on Saturday.

PARTY PLANS . . .

by Phyllis Jervey

Do you know what vivacious Harriet Meyer enjoys most during her lunch hour? As Executive Secretary of the Carmel Business Association, Harriet shops for out-of-town women who have "forgotten where we saw a beautiful pink shawl, near that little cafe...or could you tell us if the gorgeous seascape in one of those galleries is still for sale?"

Harriet's theme is to give accurate city information. This is why this muchly appreciated Carmel business gal is invaluable. Answering forty letters or more per day from all over the U.S.A. from inquirers, Harriet tells about real estate, business opportunities, restaurants, hotels, motels, and most everything that goes on in our town...with discretion.

Workable ideas continue constantly in her pretty head. With a diversified public relations background from Kona Coast, Hawaii, to Anchorage, Alaska, native-raised Californian Harriet gives us her "Thoughts for Food:"

"From my mother's hand written notebook, you will find why I became a member of the Humane Society. These yellowed pages commence with:"

BROILED QUAIL

Split them open down the back, dip in melted butter and broil over live coals, turning frequently. Have ready slices of buttered toast. In stew pan over the fire, add fresh cream, salted to taste. When the quail are done, put them in the cream for a moment. Next put each on the toast and cover with the hot cream. Season according to preference.

Harriet and your Party Plans reporter decided that today frozen cornish hens, thawed, should be split in half and take the place of quail. Accompany with fried hominy grit squares or boiled barley browned in butter, braised leeks or cabbage. Field or water cress seem just right when combined with thinly sliced oranges. Add lemon juice, olive oil, salt, paprika. This was company supper when H.M. was a child in Mill Valley.

Harriet's mother attended "Miss Tracy's Cooking Classes" in San Francisco circa 1892. Some old-time "receipts" that particularly appeal from this exclusive for Pine Cone source are:

TOMATO MARMALADE

One qt. tomatoes which cut into small pieces. Add 3/4 cup sugar. Heat until ready to boil, then reduce fire, adding a finely cut lemon with rind but minus seeds. Cook without burning. Add powdered ginger to taste and when thickened, cool and bottle.

There are many desserts. This one is called:

HARRIET'S HOT PIE CRUST RELIABLE

One and a half cups flour; 1 4 cup water with iota salt; 1 4 t. baking powder; 1 2 cup shortening.

Put flour in bowl. In another pan put shortening with boiling water until melted. Add this to flour, roll into ball. Make into one top crust after using Favorite Filling: Four lbs. cored, peeled green apples; 1 4 cup melted butter; 1 cup brandy or rum. (vanilla is not for sick persons).

Bake in quick oven (450 F.) 15 min.; reduce heat to 325 F. until apples are tender. After pie is baked, pour rum or California brandy into holes made into pie, using funnel. Serve with unsweetened thick cream while pie is still warm. Directions for "hot" oven, hold the hand whilst counting 20 sec.

Is there any wonder Harriet is fo full of vim and vigor...and good to look at...Her mother's recipes:

FOR BRONCHITIS

One lb. baking pears, 1 2 lb. raw sugar; 1 pint vinegar. Simmer together 4 or 5 hours and bottle. (Ed's note: "try to get it down.") Harriet was obedient and disciplined. That's why she is what Carmel needs now.

FOR A TONIC

Cut a lemon in pieces with rind on. Pour over 1 pint water and let come to a boil.

When are you asking us over, Harriet?

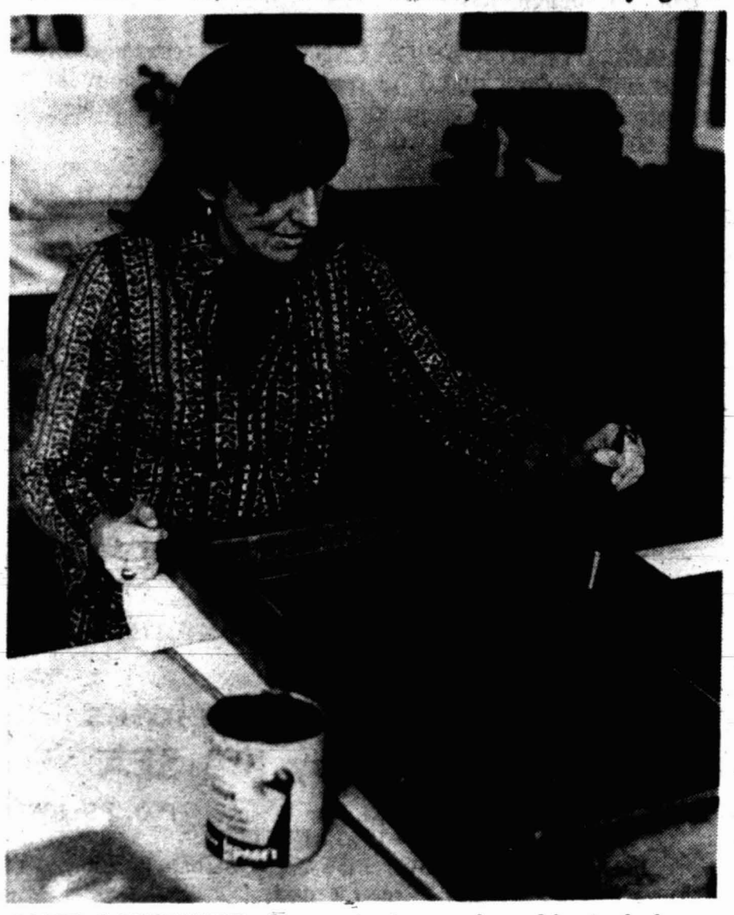
'Artists in Action' Saturday at Sunset

Sunset Center will again present "Artists in Action" on Saturday from 1:00 - 6:00 p.m., conducted on the Patio, in Studios I - II, and in the Sunset Theater. Displays, demonstrations, and performing arts will represent the residents of the Cultural Center, accented by guest artists in different media.



JANE LANDAKER demonstrates serigraphic technique, which will be one of the exhibits as "Artists in Action" Saturday at the Sunset Center. Serigraphy is a fine arts method, similar to silk-screening.

A special guest, Mrs. Dora Crabtree, known for her skills in the weaving, carding, and spinning of yard, will represent the Carmel Craft Guild and the Carmel Weavers Guild. There will be a demonstration involving several participants in the ancient art of spinning and carding yarn.

Also on display in Studio 8 will be associated crafts such as Yarn Tapestry, Crewel Embroidery, Macremae, Needlepoint and Knitting.

The painting scene will feature residents of Studio 7, known as the Artists Workshop. Noted artist and teacher Robert Horne will demonstrate the how-to's of beginning painting, and Barbara West, will demonstrate her skills as a portrait artist.

Arthur Guerra, latest member of Carmel Graphics Co-op, will present his first one-man show for Sunset Center in Studio 11, displaying large canvases of stylized figure painting. A versatile artist, working in many media, he has worked as an assistant to Nathan Olivera in a Lithography Workshop at Stanford.

ALLISON FAUL will also be at the Sunset Center this Saturday as a wandering folksinger, singing Elizabethan songs during the "Artists in Action" program.

Representing still another facet of the Fine Arts, wheel throwing will be demonstrated by a very creative young potter, Jon O'Neal, a student working under the direction of Mr. Lloyd Baskerville. Ceramics Instructor at Carmel High School. His finished pieces will be on display and available for sale along with graphics exhibits of etchings, lithographs, woodcuts, serigraphy, and paintings created by Victoria Jorgenson, Virginia Dedini, Don Clapp, Dick Crispo, Mary Beach, and Jane Landaker.

Mrs. Carey's children's classes will offer a special display of their recent 10-week-session, including etchings, woodcuts and linoleum block prints.

At 2:00 p.m., Dr. Greenberg will present his regularly scheduled program, "The Record Collector's Hour" in Sunset Auditorium.

Allison Faul and Rima Elise Mazzeo, will entertain throughout the afternoon with Elizabethan folksongs.

Also on the Patio, Mr. Daud will present his Saturday evening class in a presentation of ethnic folk dances.

Charles and Carol Winans will present two performances of the traditional Punch and Judy Show, one at 1:30 and again at 3:30 p.m. They have designed these puppets from basic balsawood, using acrylic paint for the finished product.

Bill Stone, chairman of the Art Department at Carmel High School will demonstrate the art of collage, and display many of his own works in different media.

Richard Brace will be on hand with his "Art of Animation" material and equipment. A film demonstration will be given with Pat Saylor, noted cartoonist, assisting Mr. Brace.

To climax the day, at 4:30 p.m. Sunset Theater will again be the setting for the performing arts, as Marsha Hovick's 3rd and 4th graders of the Children's Experimental Theater present an original play, "Brink of the World." It is one of three Bi-centennial oriented dramas written and directed by founder-director Marsha Hovick.

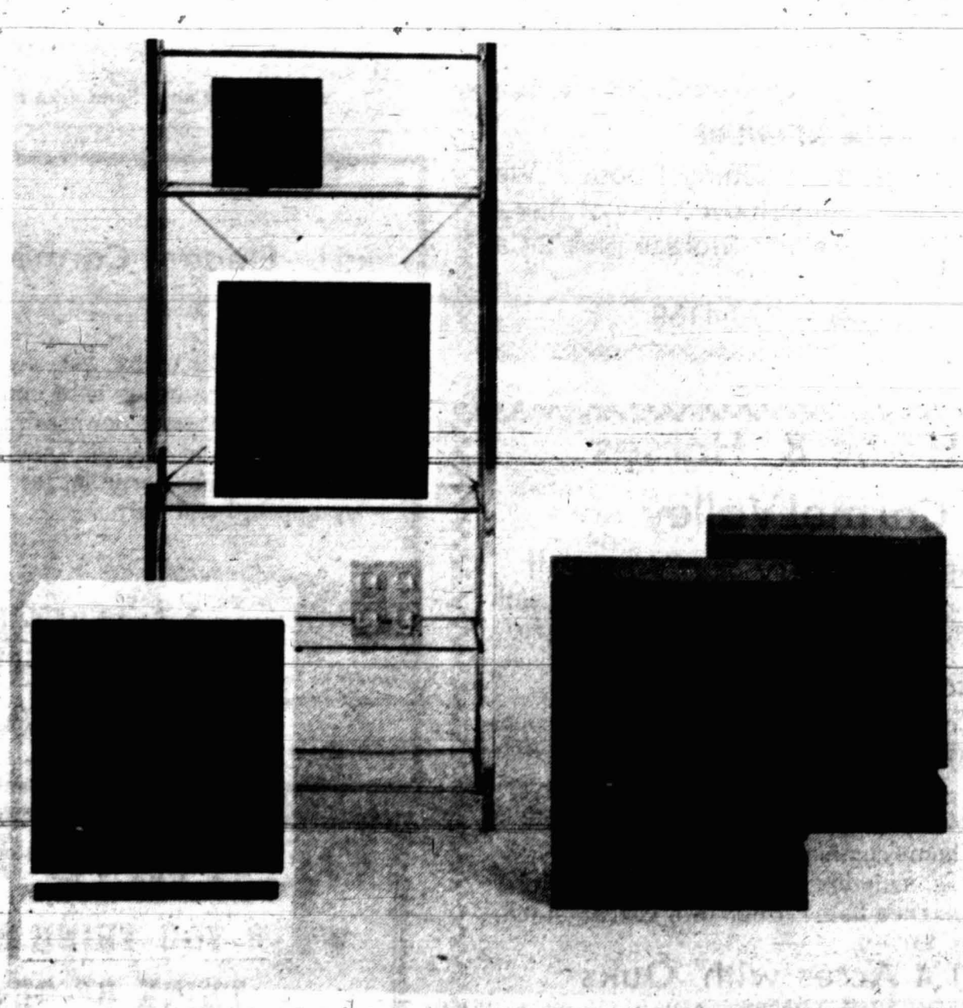
JUST ARRIVED! AQUARIUS SPEAKERS BY JBL
EVERYTHING YOU HEAR IS TRUE!

JBL



LISTEN. ENVIRONMENTAL SOUND.

If you don't know anything about stereo, the new JBL Aquarius is easy to explain.

If you know a lot, it's going to take longer.

They're a new sound. Environmental sound. (Close your eyes and those beautiful new speakers go away.)

Is it better than directional sound? No. It's different. All the lefts and rights are gone. No ping-pong. Is it different from omnidirectional? Yes. And it's better.

And, you can put Aquarius where you want it. Like a painting or a print or vase. It doesn't care about walls or 45-degree angles. All the engineering is inside.

Play it softly. The sound goes more places.

Ask our high fidelity specialists about "point source" and the "radial diffraction slot," and "overlapping frequencies." That'll shake him up.

Then listen to Aquarius. Everything you hear is true.
